Proposed Separation Terms

From: Brandon Rose | To: Marc Menowitz, via Blake Weddington | October 25, 2026

Confidential proposal for discussion only. This is not an offer, resignation, or agreement. Nothing is binding until a written agreement is signed by both sides after each has had time to review it. All rights are reserved.

Purpose

I appreciate the company's willingness to talk. I would like us to part on good terms with a clear, fair, written plan that works for everyone. Below are the terms I am proposing. I am glad to discuss any of them.

1. Interim arrangement

- At the company's request, I will not come to the office. I understand I remain an employee, on paid leave at my full pay and benefits (my regular schedule of 80 hours per pay period at $34.62, about $2,770 gross every two weeks), through the separation date below.
- Proposed separation date: Friday, November 20, 2026.
- I will stay reachable by email during business hours for reasonable handover questions. Company-specific tools and documentation will be handed over after the final agreement is signed and the first payment is made.
- We will arrange a time to exchange my personal belongings at the office and any company property I hold.

2. Proposed terms

| Term | Proposal |
|---|---|
| Severance | Five months of base pay: $30,000 gross (about $6,000 a month at my $34.62 hourly rate), paid as W-2 wages in a lump sum within 10 days after the agreement takes effect. |
| Final pay | All earned wages, accrued PTO, and any overtime or meal-break pay owed, paid when due and separate from severance. |
| Health coverage | Coverage continues through the separation date. For six months after, the company keeps paying its current share of the premium (or the COBRA premium) so my cost stays at my current $62.94 per pay period, or until I have new coverage, whichever is first. |
| Replacement laptop | A 16-inch MacBook Pro (M5 Pro, 24GB memory, 1TB storage; about $2,429 retail) to replace my laptop damaged on the October business trip, owned by me, delivered before the separation date. A cash payment of equal value is acceptable. This is separate from severance. |
| Reference | A signed letter of recommendation from Marc or Blake describing my role and the tools I built, plus a named contact who will give a positive reference to prospective employers. |
| Separation wording | The company will describe the separation as a position elimination (not a resignation or termination for cause), including in any response to the EDD or prospective employers. |
| Workers' compensation | My injury claim (no. on file), medical care, and any benefits are not affected by this agreement or any release, and I will not be treated differently because of the claim. |
| My work | My pre-existing tools, templates and general methods remain mine. The company keeps the ApartmentCorp-specific versions it paid for. I may show sanitized screenshots and descriptions of my projects, without confidential data or company branding, to future employers. |
| Release and tone | A mutual release limited to claims the law allows to be released, effective only after all wages owed are paid. It will not limit my right to talk to government agencies. Mutual non-disparagement. |

| Term | Proposal |
|---|---|
| Optional consulting | If the company wants help after I leave, I am available at $75 per hour under a separate written independent-contractor agreement, with no minimum commitment. This proposal does not depend on it. |

3. Why this is reasonable

- I built more than 20 tools covering reporting, onboarding, marketing and investor communications, far beyond the personal-assistant role I was hired for.
- A realistic job search in this field takes three to six months.
- I am recovering from a work injury and still in treatment, so continuous health coverage matters.
- A clear, written, mutual plan avoids disruption and keeps the relationship positive on both sides.

4. Next steps

- Please let me have the company's response in writing by Friday, November 6, 2026.
- If the terms are close, we can finalize a written agreement before the separation date.
- Until we finish, please keep my email, my work Claude and Manus account data, and my timekeeping records intact.
- Until a signed agreement exists, this document is a discussion draft only.
