File: ROSE-REC2_V2076-06-11-22-00-51.WAV Actual Date/Time: July 11, 2026 ~10:00 PM Duration: 43 minutes Participants: Brandon + Gerald Destination: Gerald folder

Summary

A wide-ranging evening call between Brandon and Gerald covering three main threads: (1) Gerald's rental management platform idea for Puerto Rico, (2) a GHB/drug business discussion, and (3) a social media AI agent concept. Gerald opens with a humorous disclaimer that he does not consent to this conversation being used in any movie or documentary. The call is energetic and collaborative — Gerald pitches his platform concept at length, Brandon adds features and comparisons to existing tools (RentSpree, Slack, DocuSign, Zillow), and they discuss AI agents as the backbone. The second half shifts to Brandon explaining the GHB supply chain economics to Gerald, who is tempted but declines to get involved right now while he is trying to stabilize his life. Brandon ends the call abruptly at 11 PM to drive 24 minutes to pick up a hydrocodone order from his dealer.

Speaker-Labeled Dialogue

[0:00] Gerald: "Marker? It's good. I do not consent this information to go to any movie or TV show in the future or any documentary."
[0:08] Brandon: "I'll send you a consent form." [0:09] Gerald: "If it does — show the good parts. Then I consent it." [0:14] Gerald: "Um, so I want... The platform — okay, I just jumped from your thing to mine. You just reminded me of that before. I used to keep smoking. I just wanted to tell you this. Um, it's a platform. First, it has a lot of features I wanna add with time to it. But the first one is I want to be able to receive documents on a specific email platform. I want the platform to be able to analyze those documents to know..." [0:47] Gerald: "I'm telling you it all wrong." [0:51] Brandon: "Is it, like, better-rent?" [0:52] Gerald: "I mean — I'm gonna tell you what it is, how it goes, and then you'll get it. Okay, so I'm the broker. I have the lease for a year, year and a half, depends on how the contract goes. It means that I have to stay in contact with the tenant." [1:23] Gerald: "What I wanna create in this platform is — the hassle with communication is that emotions can easily spread with rentals. People can get emotional. People get their personal stuff involved. I wanna get that out of any opportunity and conversation. I want them to submit all their paperwork through the platform, submit evidence when they've paid through the platform, and then once it's sent to the platform, the platform can access the email and send an email directly in the format that it needs to be — to provide that proof or evidence to the landlord, to me, or to whatever, to officialize things." [2:04] Gerald: "The second one is anything that they want — 'Oh, the toilet is broken' — I wanna set up communication slots so that everything is on the app, and there's minimal communication between people when it comes to this structure of renting." [2:31] Brandon: "You know what my boss did? Which is pretty brilliant. He has this device — it has a little check valve, like a buoy-type system — and you put it on the toilet. Whenever the water raises past a certain level, that buoy comes up, and it checks a valve that's plugged into the wall, and that goes to a sensor to our stuff, so we know if a unit's flooding. It's in all of his units — all four thousand of them that we micromanage." [3:09] Gerald: "Oh, that's pretty smart." [3:13] Brandon: "Anyway, just had to say that." [3:17] Gerald: "No, thank you. That's a good idea. Thanks. Um, but thank you. You should do that. What I do want in the platform is — I don't want any communication between the tenant or landlord or even myself. I just see that there's a lot of space for personal stuff. This is a business deal. There's no need to talk about anything like that. I want the platform to be able to send notices through you." [3:55] Brandon: "So it's not so much an email. It's like a messaging platform." [3:59] Gerald: "It's a messaging platform, but at the same time I can show the listings that I do have available. There's a part for tenants. There's a part for landlords, so they can see what's going on. They can see the time. And also what I wanted to create is — I have a few people that work in plumbing and electric. If they send a notification — 'Oh, something electric has gone wrong' — and in twenty, thirty minutes..." [4:31] Brandon: "Okay. That's what they're doing." [5:00] Brandon: "Have you heard of RentSpree?" [5:01] Gerald: "I mean — yeah, but none of those — there's no communication on that. There's just uploading documents and putting all your application information. There's not like a communication part where you can talk to the tenants or landlords or applicants." [5:25] Gerald: "I think it would be great because even if they would like to schedule a call or talk about something, every single request will be through the platform, not through me. And I will share my availability, and the documents will be validated through there as well." [5:33] Gerald: "It's not in Puerto Rico. People are not using any platform like that here. Even luxury places are just using Airbnb." [5:38] Brandon: "Yeah, you have a big foot up 'cause there's probably not a lot of stuff being used there." [5:50] Gerald: "People here have been using their ways that have worked for a long time, and they've innovated themselves, but not the way that they do things. I'm sure that if you come here to Puerto Rico — where you live right now, I know you're gonna move to Florida — everybody from California... You know how many people I know that split their time between California and Puerto Rico because they just got on the Act 60, they opened up similar businesses, they opened up the LLC in California to connect it to the one in Puerto Rico, and they ended up banking because there's a lot of stuff here that is already invented, already working, but has not been implemented here." [6:31] Gerald: "I think that if I do have a platform like this, it'll be a service that nobody else right now in the metro area will be able to provide — because I'm going to give them complete clarity on what's going on, no communication with their tenants, just... There's no feelings involved. If they don't pay on time, the documents can be set up, emails can be set up to give notices on time and give them evidence of that as well." [6:72] Brandon: "Yeah, they could even put in their bids, and you could have like a vendors list that you already have the certificate of insurance and W-4s and everything uploaded and everything." [6:89] Gerald: "Exactly. So you can have bidding. See, you can help the landlords because we'll have bids for just a fixer." [11:30] Brandon: "You need to go through some apps and research and figure out what you want to grab from each thing — like there's features in apps that are already in existence that you could steal the idea from. Like saying you should look at Slack and say, 'I like this from Slack. I like how it does communication. I like how it does documents. But I want it to have a feature of DocuSign where you can upload documents and sign. But I also want it to be like a real-time Zillow location type thing.' Collaborate them together." [12:00] Gerald: "I'll do that. For now, if at some point we could discuss just creating like a draft... All that will be added, it's just that since I'm going in for that meeting, I don't know when. I haven't spoken to him yet. I was waiting for him to settle from his vacation. I think contacting him the second day after he got here was not gonna be... Plus, I was depressed." [15:00] Brandon: "I'm gonna put an AI agents folder in the Drive. Could you put 'AI agents for platform' just so I don't fuck up?" [15:10] Gerald: "AI agents for the platforms. If I had to make one million dollars from zero — step by step." (Brandon plays a YouTube video — Sabrina Romanov AI channel) [19:10] Brandon: "This girl named Sabrina Romanov. She's really great. I've learned a lot of AI stuff from her. She talked about AI agents about a year ago." [19:40] Gerald: "I looked it up, and it's expensive. The AI agents. It's like fifty to a hundred fifty dollars to get a good one for five hundred communications a day or something." [19:54] Brandon: "Unless you create them yourself. Oh, if they're running on an API key maybe, 'cause it's like you get charged on usage. Free AI agents and automations library — a thousand plus free templates." [20:10] Brandon: "And for me to create my own AI like I did in my computer that's already there — if I get a super fucking desktop computer that I could have a bunch of stuff to make it more workable..." [25:35] Brandon: "My chest looks good, right? I've been trying to do more pushups." [25:40] Gerald: "She always likes your pushups." [25:52] Gerald: "When I'm done with these, with the three platforms that I wanna do, or at least they're up and running — the other thing that I wanna do is I wanna create like a social media agent. Like the one that I made? But a social media agent. I wanna have two phones. I want one phone to be my access to it, and then anything that I do on that phone when it comes to pictures, content that I create, things that I... Be appropriate with how much content I have, how much content I need to produce..." [34:10] Gerald: "This guy was at my house. He was like on the top wanted list." [34:15] Brandon: "Brandon, how many times have you told me about stuff illegals?" [34:20] Gerald: "No, legal. Just related to legal moments. I don't know. You had fun." [34:30] Brandon: "I'm a good time. I wanna tell you something to pivot from that. The guy that sold me this — we had a discussion — and it's the same thing as always, but he said there's no supplier here for DMT. There's no one here that does DMT." [35:00] Gerald: "There's no one. So there's a lot of stuff that just isn't available." [35:10] Brandon: "Like you should tell your friend — because it's — I mean, I don't know how to get it here. Well, I could figure it out. All you have to do is order the bark." [35:18] Gerald: "No. Well, the reason I mention is because there's so many people that live here from California. Think about it. It's just so many people. So even if people here in Puerto Rico are not familiar with DMT — I mean, people here aren't familiar with it either." [35:50] Brandon: "He's getting G from this guy, and he didn't even know that G comes from one person in Puerto Rico. Only one supplier supplies the whole island, just so you know." [36:00] Gerald: "Wow. Really? I wasn't aware. And he's in Ocean Park." [36:03] Brandon: "You should do it." [36:06] Gerald: "I don't... I'm not a chemist." [36:07] Brandon: "I'm sending you the site to order from right now." [36:17] Gerald: "What?" [36:18] Brandon: "That's where I get mine. I just sent you the site. I ordered some two days ago, actually." [36:21] Gerald: "Yeah, but he can't send to Puerto Rico." [36:25] Brandon: "Why? That's a company. That's like a legit franchise company." [36:46] Brandon: "That's where I order my G from — that company I just sent you. It's not a person. So there's a company that sells G legally online?" [36:57] Gerald: "Well, it's not advertised as a product that you get fucked up on. It's a cleaning chemical that people actually use to clean stuff. It's a front." [37:10] Brandon: "I mean, people... They have all sorts of other products on here. It's just a little more pricey. Like this bottle right here is one eighty-nine, but this is thirty-three milliliters. And if you do forty, that's fourteen hundred dollars that you could make off of this, and I'm paying one eighty for it." [37:30] Gerald: "As vials?" [37:32] Brandon: "Yeah. There's thirty-three of those in one of that. And on average, that's forty dollars per one, so that's forty times thirty-three — thirteen twenty. Thirteen hundred and twenty." [37:49] Gerald: "That's fucking nuts. And you pay one eighty for that." [38:00] Brandon: "See, if you go to the quick ship products — how much do you pay for one vial? Um, this is a hundred and eighty-nine dollars. So you do thirteen twenty minus one eighty-nine. That could be eleven hundred dollars profit." [38:06] Gerald: "Yeah, but how much would you sell each vial here? Because here, G is kind of expensive." [38:14] Brandon: "People here sell it for sixty." [38:17] Gerald: "Okay, sixty a vial. So cancel. Sixty times, say if you kept five for yourself, whatever, then do twenty-eight. That's — oh my God — seventeen hundred dollars." [38:36] Brandon: "Minus eighty-nine, minus twenty dollars shipping. Yeah, fifteen hundred dollars you'd make." [38:40] Gerald: "What if I wanna like sparkle it up with good packaging?" [38:46] Brandon: "Actually, if you were gonna sell in bulk, it'd make more sense to get the gallon, which is five hundred dollars." [38:54] Gerald: "Well, I think that's too much. I think I wanna start the Chinese way — small steps, steady business, steady—" [39:02] Brandon: "Yeah, you gotta get clientele." [39:06] Gerald: "No, no point in having a whole — I already have people. That's why I think we would be so attractive because everybody's doing G now." [39:14] Brandon: "And that would be a fun app to make. A G app? Well, a customer satisfactory app — where you can have your inventory, you can have QR codes, you can have ways to order, ways of shipping—" [39:34] Gerald: "How can I stay safe from the cops if they're gonna smell it?" [39:43] Brandon: "Buy a PO box." [39:47] Gerald: "Okay, Brandon, I can't do this. The reason that I think I can't do this is because if it's an option right now when I'm trying to get back on my feet, it'll — no. When I'm stable then and everything else is working out, then I'll do it because I already have people, so it'll be like free clientele." [40:12] Brandon: "Yeah, you don't wanna... You've already got all these mental and emotional tie-ups. You don't wanna really add more stressors to this." [40:19] Gerald: "That sounds more clinical than what I am." [40:26] Brandon: "I've got like an internal clock. It struck eleven o'clock, and I'm like, 'I told him I'd come in between eleven and twelve.' Yeah, I'm gonna go." [40:37] Gerald: "So are you gonna be gone for a long time or something?" [40:37] Brandon: "Well, no, it's gonna take me twenty-four minutes to get there, pick up, two minutes, twenty-four back, so an hour." [40:47] Gerald: "Are you okay?" [40:49] Brandon: "Yeah. I don't wanna do this, but he gives me like a two-day window because he's got so many clients. Like you have to do like a two-week waiting list. I told him I wanted this batch a week and a half ago just so I could get them because he'll get them ready and he'll tell people and they're like, okay, they're all gone. Makes 400 a month." * * [41 : 15] * * * Brandon :

 * "I want to—fuck—can you set up something? Do you have people from California all over San Juan and Puerto Rico? He only make 400 because he's got a 200 square foot studio apartment. If he had a bigger place, he'd be making $1,000 probably a month. So I was going to help him build a website and find a new lease and find — but then yesterday he was like, 'Could you come during business hours so we could talk?' I'm like, I ain't coming into your 200 square foot apartment. Just fucking call me. I'm not going in there because the conversations are already long enough when I pick up." [41:54] Brandon: "And then he wants to be discreet. I'm like, dude, if you want to be discreet, then quit giving me the shit in these bags. Like, this isn't discreet." [42:07] Gerald: "Is that a list? That's like what? A drug bag." [42:17] Brandon: "I love these. Can I be a silent investor? These are the best peppermints. They're called butter mints." [42:25] Gerald: "Butter mints? They like melt in your mouth." [42:33] Brandon: "This guy's so fucking weird. I wish I could like show you a picture of him. He's so strange." [42:38] Gerald: "I'll meet him." [42:40] Brandon: "You don't want to meet this person. He like talks to you like out of the corner of his eye and rolls — he's just like on the spectrum for sure, but like more than me." [42:48] Gerald: "I'm a silent investor." [42:52] Brandon: "But I mean, like I told you, I want my surgeons, my attorneys, my accountants, and my chemists to be nerdy as fuck." [43:00] Gerald: "Okay."

Business Ideas

1. Rental Management Platform (Puerto Rico) — Gerald's Primary Concept

A property management and communication platform designed specifically for the Puerto Rico rental market, where no equivalent currently exists. Gerald is a real estate broker who holds leases for 1–1.5 year terms and manages tenant-landlord relationships.

Core Features Discussed:

- Document submission portal (tenants submit payment evidence, applications, paperwork through the platform — no direct email/phone contact)
- Automated email notices (late payment notices, formal communications sent by the platform in the correct legal format)
- Communication slots for maintenance requests (toilet broken, electrical issues) — structured, not freeform
- Vendor/contractor bidding system (plumbers, electricians submit bids; certificates of insurance and W-4s pre-uploaded)
- Landlord dashboard (see real-time status, vacancy rates, payment status)
- Tenant portal (submit documents, see listings, schedule requests)
- Listing display with real-time availability/counter-offer transparency (Gerald's idea: show 48-hour counteroffer windows publicly to create urgency)
- AI agents to automate communications and document processing

Competitive Landscape:

- RentSpree: document upload only, no communication layer
- Airbnb: used even by luxury properties in Puerto Rico currently
- Opportunity: Puerto Rico is behind US mainland in PropTech adoption; Act 60 California-to-PR migration creates tech-savvy client base

Brandon's Input:

- Compare to Slack (communication) + DocuSign (document signing) + Zillow (real-time listings) combined
- Toilet flood sensor (Marc's device — buoy valve system) as potential hardware add-on
- Vendor bidding feature already exists in Marc's software ("capital improvements" module)
- AI agents folder in Drive created for Gerald to reference

Next Step: Gerald waiting to contact a potential meeting partner ("Richard"?) who just returned from vacation. Gerald was depressed and didn't want to reach out too soon.

2. Social Media AI Agent — Gerald's Secondary Concept

Gerald wants to create a dedicated social media management agent. Two-phone setup: one phone dedicated entirely to content creation (photos, videos, ideas), with an AI agent that automatically processes and posts content on schedule. Mirrors the concept of the social media agent Brandon previously built.

Status: Concept stage; to be built after the rental platform is running.

3. GHB/Drug Business — Brandon's Pitch to Gerald (Gerald Declined)

Brandon explained the economics of the GHB supply chain to Gerald and suggested he could become a supplier in Puerto Rico. Gerald was interested in the math but declined to pursue it while getting back on his feet.

Economics as discussed:

- Source: Online company selling GHB as a "cleaning chemical" (legal front)
- Price: $189 per bottle (33 mL)
- Yield: 33 vials per bottle
- Street price in Puerto Rico: $60/vial
- Revenue: $28 \text{ vials} \times 60 = 1,680$
- Profit after cost: ~$1,500 per bottle
- Gallon option: $500 (bulk)
- Only one GHB supplier currently serves all of Puerto Rico (based in Ocean Park)

Gerald's response: "Okay, Brandon, I can't do this. Not right now when I'm trying to get back on my feet. When I'm stable, then I'll do it because I already have people, so it'll be like free clientele."

Action Items / Tasks

Brandon's Tasks

- Create "AI agents for platform" folder in Google Drive and share with Gerald
- Send Gerald the Sabrina Romanov YouTube video (AI agents / $1M from zero)
- Help Gerald build a draft/wireframe of the rental platform concept
- Consider helping Gerald's hydrocodone dealer build a website and find a new (larger) lease — Brandon was already planning this before the dealer asked for an in-person meeting

Gerald's Tasks

- Research existing apps (RentSpree, Slack, DocuSign, Zillow) and identify features to incorporate into the rental platform
 - Contact the potential meeting partner ("Richard"?) once he has settled back from vacation
 - Look into Act 60 LLC structure (California LLC connected to Puerto Rico LLC) for the platform business

Research Reminders

- Sabrina Romanov — AI YouTuber Brandon recommends; specifically a video on “how to make $1M from zero” using AI agents step by step. Brandon says she taught him a lot about AI agents.
 - AI agent cost: Gerald found agents run 50–150/month for ~500 communications/day via third-party services. Brandon notes: self-hosted API-key-based agents are much cheaper (pay per usage).
 - Act 60 tax incentive (Puerto Rico) — Brandon mentioned multiple California entrepreneurs using it; worth Gerald researching for the platform business.
 - GHB online supplier — Brandon sent Gerald a link to the company he uses (sells as cleaning chemical). Not pursued by Gerald at this time.
 - DMT sourcing — Gerald's dealer says no DMT supplier in Puerto Rico. Brandon says “all you have to do is order the bark.” Not pursued.

AI Lessons Covered

- AI agents overview: Brandon explained what AI agents are, how they work, and their cost structure (API-key-based vs. third-party subscription). Shared Sabrina Romanov video as a learning resource.
 - Social media agent concept: Brandon referenced the social media agent he previously built as a model for Gerald's two-phone content system.
 - AI agents for platform automation: Discussed using AI agents to handle document analysis, automated email formatting, and communication routing within the rental platform.
 - Drive organization: Brandon created an “AI agents folder” in their shared Drive for Gerald to reference resources.

Notable Moments

- Gerald opens the call with: “I do not consent this information to go to any movie or TV show in the future or any documentary.” — then immediately adds: “If it does — show the good parts. Then I consent it.”
- Brandon abruptly ends the call at 11 PM to drive 24 minutes to pick up a hydrocodone order from his dealer, who operates out of a 200 sq ft studio apartment and has a 2-week waitlist. Brandon had pre-ordered a week and a half ago to secure the batch.
- Brandon describes his dealer as “on the spectrum for sure, but like more than me” and says he talks “out of the corner of his eye.” Gerald immediately says “I’ll meet him.” Brandon: “You don’t want to meet this person.”
- Gerald asks if he can be a “silent investor” in the dealer’s operation. Brandon says his ideal team is “surgeons, attorneys, accountants, and chemists to be nerdy as fuck.”
