

Personal Notes Report — In-Person Drug Pickup

File: ROSE-REC2_V2076-06-11-23-47-38.WAV Actual Date/Time: July 11, 2026 ~11:47 PM
Duration: 18.3 minutes Participants: Brandon + Unidentified dealer (male; 200 sq ft studio, Ocean Park area; neurodivergent; described by Brandon as “on the spectrum”) Destination: Personal Notes

Summary

Brandon drives ~24 minutes to his hydrocodone dealer’s 200 sq ft studio apartment in the late evening. The first ~13 minutes of the recording are silent (driving). Brandon arrives, parks in a red zone, and enters the dealer’s apartment. The dealer mentions a cute guy who asked him for Xanax (which he doesn’t sell but has personally). They discuss hydrocodone — the dealer confirms he has a good connection now and shows Brandon his lab setup (frozen yellow solution, airtight rubber containers, air-dried powder). The dealer gives Brandon his order in a glittery bag, which Brandon jokes is not discreet. The dealer’s neighbor Norman has been complaining about parking. Brandon is parked in the red. The transaction ends with the dealer offering to lower the price since Brandon has gotten ~20 this calendar month, contingent on his supply source being consistent.

This is the same dealer Brandon discussed with Gerald earlier in the evening (V2076-06-11-22-00-51): makes $400/month from a 200 sq ft studio, has a 2-week waitlist, Brandon was considering helping him build a website and find a larger space.

Speaker-Labeled Dialogue

(0:00–13:30: Silent — Brandon driving)

[6:24] Brandon: “Damn.” (arriving) [9:24] Brandon: “Fucking shit. Fucking shit. Stuck.” (parking difficulty) [13:30] Dealer: “Squeeze in. It’s bigger than you made it sound.” [13:32] Brandon: “It’s 200 square feet.” [13:34] Dealer: “It was built bigger than 200. Including the bathroom. So let me get it all sorted here. How’s your evening?” [13:39] Brandon: “Oh. Comme ci, comme ça.” [13:46] Dealer: “I had this really cute guy randomly ask me for Xanax, which I don’t sell, but I have, like, a reasonable personal — you know, being in this line of business, people give me many things.” [13:59] Brandon: “Yeah, bartering.” [14:00] Dealer: “I have a little bit of anything. Of everything. So I was like, ‘Well—’” [14:02] Brandon: “Except your favorites that you always want.” [14:05] Dealer: “What are they?” [14:05] Brandon: “The Percocets?” [14:07] Dealer: “I can’t remember. Uh — what you always are looking for.” [14:09] Brandon: “The, um, hydrocodone.” [14:11] Dealer: “Oh, yeah, that’s whenever they went to Schedule II or whatever. It’s so hard to find.” [14:15] Brandon: “Yeah, or Schedule III. They’re, like, weaker than Oxy, but they’ve become harder to find.” [14:21] Dealer: “It’s easier to be functional on them.” [14:24] Brandon: “Like, Oxy — I mean, yeah, momentarily — Oxy feels amazing, but you feel too good to, like, do any real work. These make you feel like you’re getting a massage while you work. Like, you can still actually work.” [14:38] Dealer: “I love hydrocodones. My mom takes three Oxys a day for her pain, though, you know.” [14:41] Brandon: “Right. But, so the downside is these are cut with Tylenol to start.” [14:45] Dealer: “Oh, so T3s?” [14:46] Brandon: “So, like, you... And it starts to hurt your stomach at a point.” [14:49] Dealer: “And your liver, yeah.” [14:50] Brandon: “I mean, they’re bad either way. Right. You take milk thistle. But, so — and these are the 10s. They make them in different...” [14:57] Dealer: “Uh, so I have a decent connection now after that.” [15:03] Brandon: “Yeah.” [15:05] Dealer: “So I make it all, you know, like — oh, like, really?” [15:07] Brandon: “I was expecting it — if you’re curious, you know.” [15:17] Dealer: “Wow. And then also — so that’s like, uh, they’re also — I get to see the lab. They’re also underneath the — oh my gosh.” [15:26] Brandon: “Right.” [15:27] Dealer: “And then after — I don’t have a sense of smell.” [15:29] Brandon: “But does it not have smell?” [15:30] Dealer: “Well, it does, but I — you have to open it, you know? There’s — they have a rubber, so it’s airtight. And then they’re mixed in there, and then frozen in here.” [15:41] Brandon: “Wow.” [15:41] Dealer: “And so that’s — that’s a whole thing going on — that’s what — freezing is what makes the powder fall out of, uh, the yellow solution. So, uh, um — there you go. Double check that, ‘cause I kind of mentioned — and then I air dry it. So, you know, I — this is, like, my workspace — but yeah, ‘cause I tried to make it so it’s not, like, obvious, like, there’s a big lab, you know?” [16:11] Brandon: “Well, no, honestly. It’s all hidden. You want to be discreet, but you’re giving me a big old fucking glittery bag.” [16:16] Dealer: “But yeah, a lot of people have, like, made snarky comments, like, about me getting into cars and things even.” [16:27] Brandon: “Oh, well — right, right — those are just neighborly duties to be an asshole.” [16:30] Dealer: “Right. Like I’m — my neighbor told me yesterday where I can and cannot park on the street. I’m like, ‘Bitch, I’m gonna park wherever I want.’ He thinks ‘cause he’s 75 he can tell me whatever he wants. You know — Norman.” [16:41] Brandon: “So I also do that, but only if people block the actual crosswalk.” [16:48] Dealer: “Oh, he just wants his tenants to have this spot.” [16:51] Brandon: “No, no, I don’t say that I’m like God of parking. But I do start complaining if people actually park in the crosswalk.” [16:59] Dealer: “Like — oh, sure, yeah. That’s a common... People do it all the time here.” [17:03] Brandon: “Um — speaking of, I’m parked in the red, so.” [17:05] Dealer: “Right.” [17:06] Brandon: “Uh...” [17:12] Dealer: “Yes. Okay, good. All right. Yeah. Good to see you.” [17:14] Brandon: “I’m glad that I actually was, like, proactive this time and didn’t — there — it’s easier to get a real street spot during business hours.” [17:24] Dealer: “A lot of people only come home for work, so that’s why I say, like, before 4:00.” [17:27] Brandon: “Sure. Well, I meant like putting in the order.” [17:30] Dealer: “Oh, yeah, yeah. That kind of sort of... All right. Good luck to you. And you — since you got, you got, like, 20 this calendar month, so I mean—” [17:37] Brandon: “I know. It wouldn’t make much sense...”

[17:38] Dealer: "I will lower the price." [17:39] Brandon: "I mean, it's — well, if the person that I was getting 'em with was consistent, I would be." [17:43] Dealer: "You know? Okay. Well — I'll see you now. All right. Thank you." [17:46] Brandon: "Enjoy." [17:47] Dealer: "Bye."

Notable Moments

- Dealer's lab setup: hydrocodone powder extracted from a yellow solution via freezing, then air-dried; stored in airtight rubber containers; delivered in a glittery bag. Dealer says he tried to make it look like a normal workspace.
- Brandon jokes: "You want to be discreet, but you're giving me a big old fucking glittery bag."
- Dealer's neighbor Norman (age 75) told him where he can and cannot park. Dealer: "I'm like, 'Bitch, I'm gonna park wherever I want.'"
- Dealer offers to lower the price because Brandon has purchased ~20 units this calendar month — contingent on his own supply source being consistent.
- Brandon is parked in a red zone during the transaction.
- This is the same dealer Brandon described to Gerald earlier tonight: 200 sq ft studio, makes $400/month, has a 2-week waitlist, talks "out of the corner of his eye," neurodivergent. Brandon was considering helping him build a website and find a larger space.